

We referred in Jordan's intervention before that Jordan is facing water scarcity situation that affects grain production from which Jordan imports 2 million tons per year including wheat, barley and maize.

These conditions obliged the government to encourage the private sector to invest in grain production in Sudan.

Jordan believes that enabling such investment environments in Sudan and other African countries will help reducing food shortage and at the same time enhance the living life standards thus achieving Millennium Development Goals in these countries.