

Pakistan

According to the representative of Pakistan, too many existing global environmental mechanisms were soft in terms of commitment and compliance. Normative and operational aspects must be clearly differentiated and, to avoid a conflict of interest, no one United Nations agency should be tasked with both, he said. Moreover, the discussion on national implementation should be more focused and aim to identify which agency would lead the push on that front.