Cross-sector partnerships as new paradoxical governance form

'Classical' PPPs	Cross-sector partnerships for sustainable development
For-profit - public	For profit – public (intern./national) – NGO - research
Up-front investment	Combined resources
Government sets the rules	Co-design
Transfer risk to private sector for delivery	Shared risk between parties
Contract-based with clear accountability	Co-accountability
Transactional relationship	Transformative relationship

Equity

KNOWING YOUR ROLE

- Contribution is properly valued (respect for added value)
- Clear roles, responsibilities and rights
- Basic rules of the game for the collaboration
- Capacity building measures for partnering through trainings, guidelines, and toolkits
- Joint ownership of the process and outcomes
- Facilitation & convening

Transparency

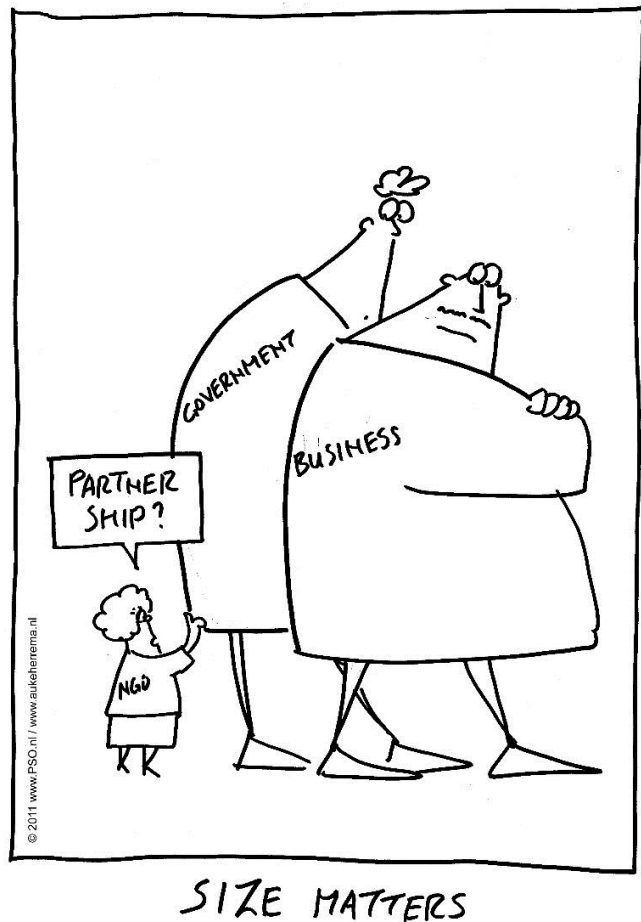

You NEED TRUST

- Build trust between partners to support day-to-day working relationship
- Taking time for clarity about individual objectives
- Clear and ongoing information flow (internal and external)
- Clarity in partner expectations with regard to relationship and benefits
- ‘Small wins’

Inclusiveness

- Engage all partners in collaborative decision-making
- Engage as early as possible
- Distribute tasks according to expertise and capabilities
- Facilitate spaces for informal interaction and feedback
- Foster a culture of mutual adjustment

Promoting Effective Partnering

In September 2015, the world community agreed on a new, universal plan for a sustainable future comprising 17 goals with 169 targets: the Sustainable Development Goals.

When governments, the United Nations, businesses, philanthropies and civil society work hand-in-hand, we can achieve great things
Ban Ki-moon
Secretary General of the United Nations

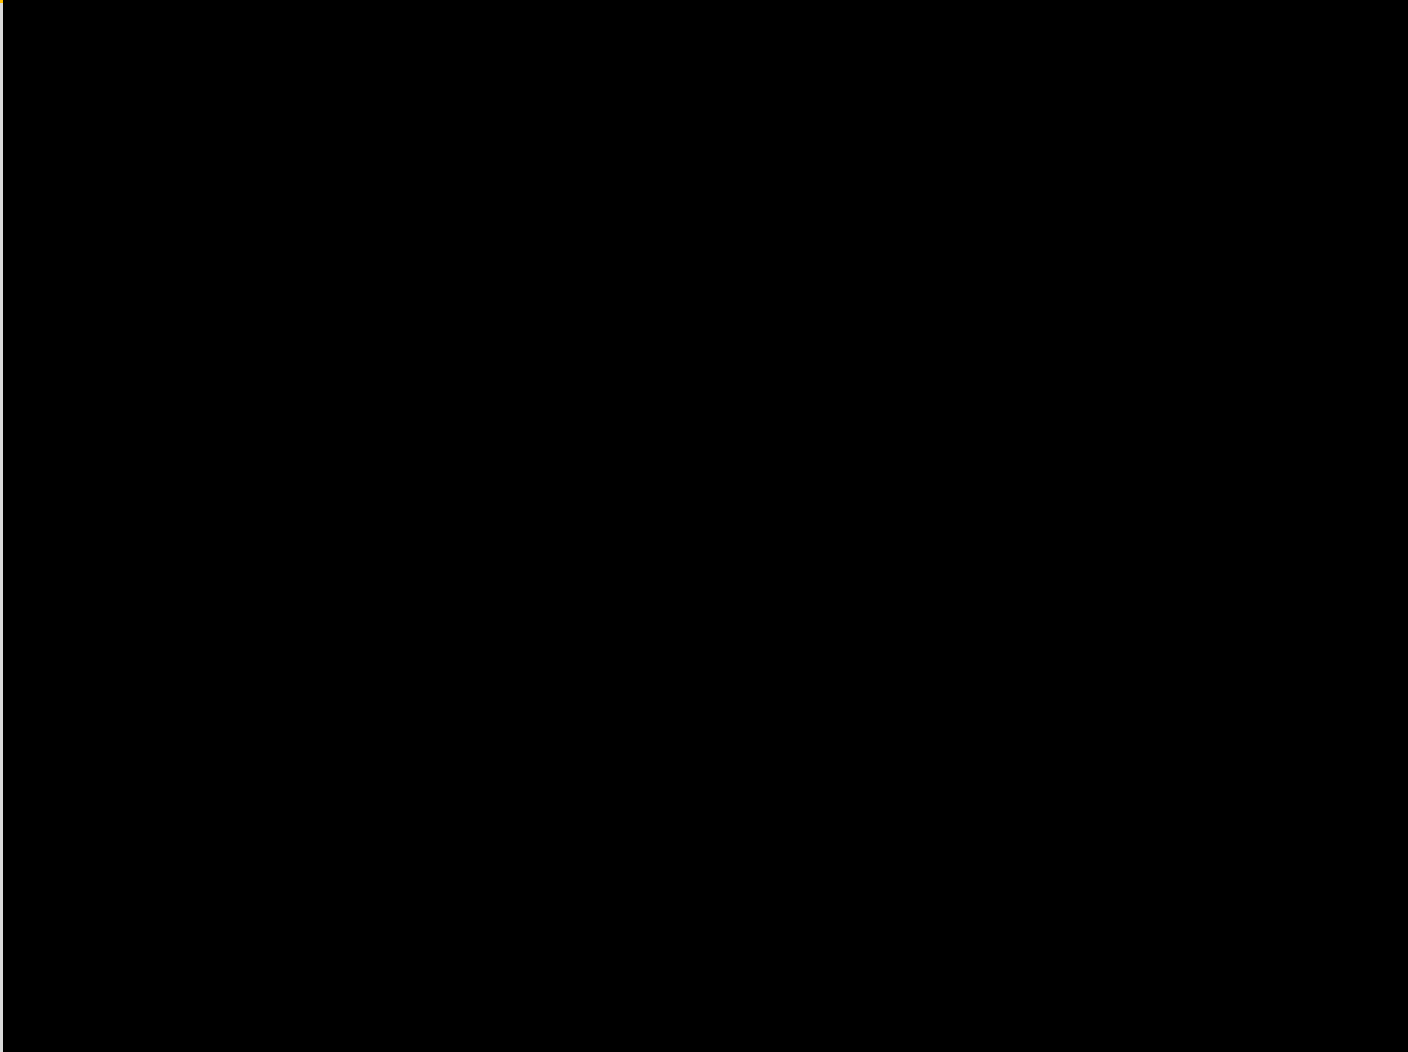

The PEP Facility intends to drive the global movement for quality partnering for the Sustainable Development Goals. The site aims to bring together the foremost work on partnering theory and implementation.

PEP invites you to join our efforts to stimulate increasing excellence in partnering. Read through this website, link to useful resources, find support organisations, and join the conversation.
