7 to 16 July 2020

Overview – For the press

As the world confronts the COVID-19 pandemic, the High-Level Political Forum on Sustainable Development – the central platform for measuring progress on the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and its 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) – has taken on greater significance this year as countries look for answers and solutions that will limit the spread of the virus while recovering better to build societies that are equal, prosperous and resilient.

The 197 UN members and members of UN specialized agencies, UN system organizations, Intergovernmental organizations, the major groups and other stakeholders will gather virtually for the Forum between 7 to 16 July to discuss progress, challenges, and opportunities for coordinated and collaborative efforts to speed up the implementation of the SDGs while addressing the wide-ranging impacts of the pandemic.

The Decade of Action

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and its Sustainable Development Goals – adopted by world leaders in 2015 - provide a comprehensive approach to address the challenges we face today: from gender inequality and rising unemployment to environmental degradation. However, recognizing that the world is off track to achieve the Goals by 2030, world leaders launched the Decade of Action and Delivery for Sustainable Development earlier this year, which calls for governments, businesses, civil society and individuals to urgently step up action – by mobilizing efforts, raising ambition and providing game changing solutions in the next ten years.

COVID-19 at the heart of HLPF discussions

COVID-19 has made the situation far worse, claiming the lives and livelihoods of people in every country. The SDGs must now play a major role in shaping the response to the emergency and the recovery, and the Forum presents a critical opportunity to ramp up engagement on the Goals. It serves as the global forum for providing political leadership, guidance on achieving the SDGs through the sharing of experiences, including success stories on the ground; as well as developing policy recommendations for strengthening implementation, follow-up and review. It will examine what specific actions can move the world in the right direction, to invest in the eradication of poverty, ensure food security, provide social protection, protect human rights, promote good health, develop new educational systems, create essential infrastructure to support modern energy sources, clean water and sanitation, sustainable transport and access to technology, improve governance, tackle illicit financial flows, stamp out corruption and develop fair taxation and trade systems. In this role, the Forum promotes an exchange of best practices and supporting international cooperation. A global recession, accompanied by a staggering rise in unemployment and overwhelmed health systems across the globe as a result of the pandemic will provide an added sense of urgency to the discussions at the Forum.

Presentation of Voluntary National Reviews

47 countries will share the impact of COVID-19 and the actions they are taking to move forward from 10 to 16 July.
