Is there any specific SDG education module available for the school students?

From Divya Singhal to Everyone: 06:46 PM

@Vallippan- This is good to know. I am a Professor at the Goa Institute of Management, Goa and we do work with higher education students. For connection my Twitter: @ajmerkdivya

Here is our case study <https://bit.ly/36xsD0d>, in recent Positive Impact Rating, we were rated as Pioneering school.

From Valliappan Manickam to Everyone: 06:46 PM

Thanks Divya. Interesting to see your academics.

Find projects students can work on around the world in person or remotely (post your projects too) at <https://projectsthatmatter.org/> and <https://forgood.nus.org.uk>

Also see resources at <https://www.aashe.org/partners/dans/> and <https://www.aashe.org/partners/heasc/>

From Florencia Librizzi to Everyone: 06:48 PM

Hello Valliappan, I think it would be good that take a lot your videos in the SDG Academy Library where you can search by topic, SDG, series, faculty, etc.

From Joel Gill to Everyone: 08:03 PM Great to hear from a geoscientist today! Thanks Rosanele for sharing your story. For those interested - Geology for Global Development, the University of Hull, the University of Nairobi, and Kenyatta University are involved in a project examining the specific contributions from Earth scientists required to achieve Kenya's Vision 2030 and the SDGs in Kenya - and comparing this to current training opportunities to identify any gaps and inform a roadmap to strengthen Earth science education for sustainable development. For an information sheet about this work please email joel@gfgd.org – we would welcome feedback on platforms where we could deposit our methodology, results and outputs to help encourage replication elsewhere and scale up the potential impact of this work. Many thanks to all.
